Tree-mendous Edmonds Returns November 7 with Free Native Trees and Shrubs

EDMONDS, WA — The Edmonds Stewards and the City of Edmonds will host the fifth annual Tree-mendous Edmonds native tree and plant giveaway on Saturday, November 7, from noon to 3 p.m. at City Park.

Volunteers will be giving away 700 free native trees and shrubs that grow well in Edmonds' climate and are a good fit for home gardens. About 20 different species will be available while supplies last.

The Edmonds Marsh Estuary Advocates, Friends of Edmonds Trees, the Sierra Club, and other local environmental groups will be on hand to answer gardening questions and share information on planning and maintaining sustainable landscapes as the climate warms.

City Field Arborist Debra Dill will demonstrate proper pruning techniques. City staff will also be available to answer questions about changes to the Edmonds Tree Code, including how the changes affect tree removal on private property, and discuss the City's efforts to protect and expand Edmonds' urban tree canopy.

Tree-mendous Edmonds is free and open to the public. All ages are welcome, and registration is not required. The event is co-sponsored by Sound Salmon Solutions Edmonds Stewards and the City of Edmonds.
